

DENTON, TEXAS.

The Department of Geography at the University of North Texas (UNT) invites applications for a tenure-track assistant professor in human geography specializing in Hispanic studies starting September 1, 2010.

As a tenure-track member of the faculty, candidates will be expected to develop a record of scholarly research necessary to obtain tenure. Candidates will also be expected to effectively teach undergraduate and graduate students, supervise graduate students, and serve the department and university. The normal departmental teaching load is two courses per semester.

Minimum qualifications: (1) an earned doctorate; (2) research experience in US-Mexico relations; (3) regional expertise in Mexico; and (4) prior instructional experience.

Preferred qualifications: (1) knowledge of sustainable development; and (2) research expertise in additional region(s) of Middle/South America.

This is an outstanding opportunity to be part of a dynamic, interdisciplinary program addressing human/environment interactions of regional and global importance. The department exemplifies the university's vision of a student-centered research institution emphasizing diversity, internationalization, and collaboration. We offer both bachelors and masters degrees in geography and are primary contributors to interdisciplinary masters and doctoral programs in environmental science. UNT is an emerging national research institution located in the vibrant and rapidly expanding Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan area. University enrollment is over 36,000 students.

Applicants must apply at: <https://facultyjobs.unt.edu>. Submit all required materials, including: (1) cover letter; (2) statement of teaching philosophy; (3) statement of research interests; (4) complete curriculum vitae; and (5) names, mailing addresses, e-mail addresses, and phone numbers for three references.

Review of applications begins November 15, 2009, continuing until the search is closed. UNT is an AA/ADA/EOE committed to diversity.
